

FERPA Removes Numbers from Prison Uniforms

The Federal Prisoner Union just filed a suit to move the prison system under the U.S. Department of Education. Their attorney read FERPA and determined that with USED the prisoners would have large cell sizes and no one would know who was in any of them. Even better, when they got out, no one could track them without permission and they would get notified anytime someone accessed their records.

The Eduguru Speaks: Our students have always said that we treat them like prisoners. That was never true, but the prisoners wish it were.
